

Dining Room in Queen Marie's Chicago Hotel

This is the main dining room in the fashionable Lake Shore Drive hotel, the lodging place of Queen Marie of Rumania in Chicago. The management provided a private dining room for the royal guest, but she preferred to take some of her meals in this beautiful room where a solid gold service was placed at her disposal.

Canadian Liquor Smuggled in Coal Is Nabbed

Prohibition agents at Spokane, Wash., found liquor was being smuggled across the Canadian border hidden in a car of coal, and after a pistol battle they caught three men and a woman and seized whisky valued at $10,000 and four automobiles. Above is shown some of the captured booze with the officers.

"Ears" of the Coast Artillery

Among the chief items of interest in the Electrical exposition in New York was this listening device used by the coast artillery to detect the faint buzzing of a plane, along with the distance and direction from whence it comes.

New Flag for the National Capitol

For the first time in history another flag flew from the same mast with the Stars and Stripes on the United States Capitol building on Armistice day. It is a service flag donated by the Gold Star Mothers on which is written the number of American boys who failed to come back from "Over There." This photograph shows Mrs. H. H. McClure (right), national president of the American War Mothers, presenting to David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, this unusual flag.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Imbedded in fossil rock thousands of years old, impressions of leaves and pine needles have been uncovered in the Sequoia Petrified Forest by two University of California scientists, Dr. Ralph Chaney, paleobotanist, and Dr. Willis Jepson of the botany department. Thirty feet under ground they made a discovery which geologists and botanists regard as important. Fossil rock was turned up which bore distinct impressions of the Sequoia foliage and the leaves of the coast live oak. These foliage casts in the formation give a more definite evidence than any other scientific material yet discovered of the kind of trees which flourished in the great forest about one million years ago.

During National Apple Week, which closed November 13, committees from the Watsonville Kiwanis Club distributed apples to more than 50,000 passengers who passed through Watsonville Junction on Southern Pacific trains. Members of the club met every train during the day and saw that each passenger had one or more apples with the compliments of the club and the packers and growers of the valley. The closing day apple cider also was served to all passengers. It was supplied by the manufacturer, Grant Cornell, and was served by a bevy of high school girls.

Dredging operations for the Ford Motor Company plant at the harbor line between the cities of Los Angeles and Long Beach are well under way. The Ford project will cover forty acres and will be by far the largest manufacturing enterprise on the Pacific Coast. Although the detailed plans of the factory have not yet arrived from the engineering offices of the Ford Motor Company in Detroit, it is obvious from the scope of the plans now being followed that several millions of dollars will be invested here by the great Detroit automobile concern.

The Jackson City Band at Jackson, Amador county, will celebrate its golden jubilee Saturday, December 11th, and is making extensive plans for the occasion. There will be a number of features. It is planned to have a band concert in the evening given by the Jackson Women's Band and the City Band. The entire event will conclude with a grand ball. The Jackson City Band was organized in 1876 by Wallace Kay and has been an active organization since the date when it first started its activities.

The fall meeting of the California Press Association was held in San Francisco. Approximately 200 editors and their wives from all parts of the state were in attendance. Vital subjects were discussed and many instructive papers were read before the convention. Gov. Friend W. Richardson, president of the association, presided. Through the courtesy of the Henry Duffy Players, the convention, en masse, witnessed one of the best comedies ever shown in San Francisco, "Alias the Deacon."

The freakish wind which did some damage recently at Victor, two miles east of Lodi, gave one man a free ride before it lifted and disappeared in an eastward direction. The damage was confined to nonresidential buildings in the outskirts of the town. John Giger, a ranch hand, was trapped by the big whirlwind-like disturbance, lifted from the ground and unceremoniously dropped 200 feet away in a corn field. He escaped with bruises.

A movement designed to place the operating properties to the power companies back on the county assessment rolls has been launched by the members of the Plumas County Board of Supervisors, who have asked Butte County to join with them in the movement. Residents of Plumas declare that the mountain counties where hydroelectric plants are operating are discriminated against under the present method of taxation.

The Western Fruit Company, Redlands, packers and shippers of California fruits, has purchased the packing house which was formerly owned by the Redlands Heights company. They are spending several thousand dollars in repairs to the house, and also putting in the late type of machinery for packing oranges and will have a capacity of four cars of fruit each day, officials said.

Building permits for the four peninsula cities of Palo Alto, Redwood City, San Mateo and Burlingame for October totaled the sum of $719,246, as against $54,721 for October, 1931. San Mateo led with a total of $293,744 for October, 1932. Palo Alto followed with a total of $129,432 in building permits. Redwood City was next with a total of $99,820, followed by Burlingame with a total of $96,250.

Beauties of the Sequoia National Park have their drawbacks. Dan Purrell of Oakland dreamed of a small apple orchard just outside the park and bought 100 acres in Lake Canyon without seeing it. Two years ago he tried to find the land, without success and has just located it in the largest pile of rocks in that section of the Sierras.

Seeking a free supply of food in the mountains of Modoc county, the Indian tribes of that district, according to word from Cedarville, have organized drives, resulting in the slaughter of 9,500 rabbits in the last ten days. In addition to the bountiful food supply, the Indian hunters have been paid a county bounty of 5 cents each for destruction of the animals.

Forecasting the heaviest automobile tourist travel into California from the east through San Bernardino county in 1926 in history, Horticultural Commissioner John P. Coy announced that the first ten months of this year a greater number of automobiles was checked at the Daguerre quarantine station than during any twelve months since this station was opened.

The Sonoma Properties Company, owner of Boyes Springs, Sonoma county, awarded a contract for the construction of a two and three story frame and stucco hotel building with tile roof, to be erected at Boyes Springs. The structure is designed in the Spanish style of architecture. It will contain 100 rooms, with baths and will cost about $200,000.

Bones of Chinese, sealed in boxes in the usual way for shipment to the Flowering Kingdom, yesterday found their way to the Marysville city dumps, and were later recovered.

The boxes, holding the bones, formerly used as an undertaking establishment, and, during the year 1910 were overlooked at shipping time. Workmen engaged in cleaning the rear room of the former chapel house followed orders to take everything to the dumps. Noting the sealed boxes, curious visitors to the dumps opened one. The bones went to China in the next shipment.

The annual convention of Kiwanis clubs in California and Nevada, in session at San Jose, selected Wendell C. Thomas of San Jose as district governor, and Fred Kistemann of Oakland as district treasurer. Hollywood was selected for the 1937 convention.

Good Printing
THE kind of printing that pays dividends is the kind you should use. Pale, muddy, poorly printed matter is worn out. The quality of your business is often judged by the quality of your stationery. Inferior printing gives an impression of cheapness that is hard to overcome, while good printing carries with it a desirable suggestion of quality.

Coolidge Address in Kansas City Chief Event of Armistice Day.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ACROSS the east and standing in silence, all America paid tribute at 11 o'clock on Armistice day, to the memory of our World War dead—the 1000 young men who gave up their lives in France or in the camps in this country. Eleven thousand posts of the American Legion participated in the ceremonies, and the American people generally joined in the solemn observance of the occasion. The feature of the day was marked by the feature of the Armistice day—the dedication of the state party Memorial in Kansas City—because the speaker of the day was President Coolidge. Five days before he was there, as vice president, to lay the cornerstone. Last night he returned, accompanied by the Coolidge, Everett Sanders, his secretary, and Secretary of War F. Davis, who, as the Missouri member of the cabinet, did the honors of the state at the exercises. The president arrived in Kansas City Thursday morning and after the dedication of the memorial the president and his wife left in the afternoon for the trip to Washington.

QUEEN MARIE OF RUMANIA

spent the weekend in Chicago, where she was fittingly entertained by both the city officials and society, and there there was the usual American exhibition of social pushing and of that inverted snobbery that advertises the respect for royalty and all that pertains to it. On the way east from the Pacific coast the squabbles among the royal party, and some others quit the party, leaving Col. J. H. Carroll, manager of the tour, and Maj. Stanley Ashburn, the queen's personal aide, remaining in supreme control. Marie took no sides in the controversies but stated that there must be peace and harmony on the rest of the tour. It was announced that while the queen was resting in Washington for four days after the conclusion of the trip, she and Nicolas and Princess Elena had traveled back to Chicago on a special train to witness the Army football game on November 27.

Will Continue Fight for Universal Draft

The American Legion will renew its 17-year-old legislative fight for universal draft at the earliest opportunity, according to James F. Barton, president of the Legion. "The Legion, at its national convention in Philadelphia, urged again upon Congress the immediate enactment of legislation to make possible mobilization of all resources, both of material and man power, in event of war," as for which President Lowell of Harvard apologized to President Hibben of Princeton, and the Harvard Crimson aggravated the ill-feeling by its editorials. But the real reason for Princeton's action was the announcement of Harvard's proposed new policy in football matters, under which Harvard would have only one fixed game on its schedule each year—the contest with Yale. It would play Princeton some years, but not others, and Princeton resented this casual treatment. Princetonians have the satisfaction of having licked Harvard in the last game. Outlets of Harvard men, Princeton will have the backing of the country generally in the controversy.

SUPPLEMENTING A STATEMENT

from the White House, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon made an official announcement of the administration's plan for income tax reductions, showing it is not proposed to compute the flat percentage cut on 1926 tax payments on last year's incomes. As made known by Mr. Mellon, the program is to propose legislation authorizing a flat reduction amounting to probably 12 1/2 per cent on individual and corporation income taxes to be reported in March, 1927, on 1926 earnings. The taxpayer will compute his tax at the rates provided by the present law. He then will be permitted to reduce his actual payment by the percentage agreed upon. If he pays his entire tax at the time of filing the return, he will deduct 12 1/2 per cent from the total. If he pays in four installments, he will deduct 25 per cent from his March payment and also 25 per cent from his June payment. His September and December payments will not be subject to any cut.

VINCENT MASSEY

has been appointed Canada's first minister in Washington by an order in council passed by the dominion cabinet. Mr. Massey is in England with Premier Mackenzie King attending the imperial conference. The question now naturally arises whether the United States shall appoint a minister to Ottawa. Some of the leading Canadian newspapers think no other course is open for Washington, and it is favored by some journals in states along the border. It may be the matter will be solved by the enlarging of the powers of the United States consul general in Ottawa.

ONCE more the United States

protests to Mexico against the oil and land laws of that country. The latest in a long succession of notes on this subject was handed to the Mexican foreign office by Charge d'Affaires Schoenfeld, and again was stressed the necessity for fundamental modifications in these two laws to eliminate from them all possibility of their retroactive application in violation of agreements entered into between the two governments in 1923. Late reports indicate that General Obregon is not having an easy time in carrying out his plan to destroy the Yaqui Indians as a people and scatter them through the country. The Yaquis are fighting with all their old-time desperation, have gathered strong forces and at last advice are threatening the towns of Mazatlan and Las Pasturas, both of which have considerable American interests. The Cuernavaca Indians, who have been peaceful for years, are showing signs of going on the warpath with the Yaquis.

FORMER Secretary of the Interior

Albert B. Fall, appeared before the District of Columbia Supreme court and pleaded not guilty to charges of conspiracy to defraud the government in the naval oil reserve leases. The trial was set for November 22 and counsel for the defendants said they will be ready to proceed with the case at that time. Both Fall and Doheny are named with E. L. Doheny, Jr., in another indictment which charges bribery in connection with young Doheny's delivery of $100,000 in "a black satchel" to Fall during the negotiations which resulted in the execution of the Elk Hills reserve leases.

in the senate by Capper of Kansas.

"There followed a series of attacks based on the fear that the law would allow the President to conscript labor in peace time. Last year Representative Johnson introduced the Legion's universal draft bill, slightly modified in language to completely refute the charge that it would provide for the industrial draft of workers in time of peace through presidential action alone. Senator Capper introduced an identical measure in the senate. These two bills are still before congress."

AT THE bidding of Premier Mussolini, the Italian chamber of deputies expelled 120 members of the so-called Aventine opposition on the ground that they had absented themselves ever since the protest "strike" resulting from the murder of Matteotti, Socialist deputy. The ousted members lost their parliamentary immunity and some of them were arrested, but most of them had taken the precaution of leaving Rome. The chamber also passed the law providing the death penalty for attempts on the life of Mussolini or the royal family. The duke took to himself another cabinet job—that of the minister of the interior—and issued orders for a systematic application of all laws for the preservation of the regime and the preservation of public order. The premier has apologized amply to France for the attacks on French consulates, and it seems likely he also will be able to calm the indignation of the French brought on by the operations of Ricciotti Garibaldi as a Fascist agent in France. The Paris police are still trying to find out just what was Garibaldi's connection with the Catalan uprising which was nipped by the Perpignan arrests.

GREECE held its elections last week and the Republicans were victorious, winning about 65 per cent of the votes and 100 of the 280 seats in parliament. Premier Condylis and his government resigned and President Condouriotis called on Kafandaris to form a new cabinet. It was hoped that former Premier Venizelos would return and accept the ministry of foreign affairs.

WILL the simple declaration that light travels at the rate of 299,792 kilometers per second, made before the National Academy of Science in Philadelphia, Dr. Albert A. Michelson of the University of Chicago announced the practical completion of the research that has occupied most of his time for forty years. The old rate of light travel, as used in scientific research and given in all the textbooks, had been established at 298,800 kilometers per second, or 84 kilometers more than that determined by Doctor Michelson. Astronomers and physicists will now have to overhaul and reshape their calculations. The Chicago scientist's latest results were worked out in California by flashing a beam of light from Mount Wilson to Mount San Antonio and back again, a distance of 44 miles. This work was carried on all summer.

HUNDREDS of natives were drowned and great property damage was done by a typhoon that swept over a section of the island of Luzon in the Philippines. Many villages were wiped out and the inhabitants blown into the sea to perish. It was estimated that the storm destroyed 5 per cent of the world's coconut crop. The town of La Plata, Md., was struck by a tornado that wrecked a schoolhouse and some houses and killed about a score of persons, fourteen of whom were school children.

AMONG the deaths recorded during the week was that of James K. Hackett, one of America's best actors, in Paris. He had spent much of his time of late in France and was exceedingly popular in that country. C. G. Sholes, who as a youth was Sherman's personal telegraph operator on the march to the sea, passed away in Chicago. Rev. D. D. Forsyth, secretary of the Methodist board of missions, died in a Chicago hospital.

FOLLOWING the example of the governments of Italy and Russia, Marshal Pilsudski, dictator of Poland, caused to be issued a decree which threatens with fines and prison sentences ranging from three days to three months whoever spreads wrong information about government action or government members or military movements. If reports are spread by the newspapers, they will be suppressed and the owners, as well as the men responsible for the news, will be fined or jailed. The important point is that the Polish government reserves unto itself the right to interpret this law as it pleases, thereby forcing everybody in Poland to live in the uncertainty of the days of despotism.

Silhouette Featuring Chic Evening Outfits

Evening frocks are so varied this autumn that it is difficult to classify them. The main distinction made is one of silhouette. There is the frock that hangs straight, except when the wearer moves, and there is the definite picture gown. The straight frocks are often draped, either to one side or to the middle of the figure, the gathered folds hanging a few inches below the rest of the hem, while the

MATRON'S VELVET GOWNS; VOGUE IS FOR METAL TRIM

WINTER modes assure the supremacy of velvet for informal daytime as well as formal evening wear. Suitability to this or that occasion is bespoken in the styling of the garment rather than the velvet of which it is made.

This is admirably illustrated in the trim two-piece velvet frocks which are the very essence of smart style at this moment. They are fashioned of chiffon velvet either in beige or some other exquisite tone or tint, yet due to their strict tailoring, long sleeves and high neckline they at once proclaim themselves as being sports or daytime apparel.

True, too, is this in regard to the very plain black velvet frocks which young girls have taken to wearing. These usually have rather high necklines and long close-fitting sleeves. With them neat lingerie collar and cuff sets are usually worn, those of Irish crochet or Italian flit being first in favor.

Recognized at a glance is the adaptability of the long-sleeved model in this picture to the demand of informal afternoon wear—a bridge party perhaps, or an "at home." Very simply styled in this recent creation of Lanvin. It is of brown velvet and reminds one of the princess style. A slight fullness is given the sides by a judicious positioning of plaits extending from the hips. One's attention is caught by the long band of gold and silver tube trimming which outlines the neckline extending to below the hemline at the front, also forming the inside of the new-style bell-shape cuffs. This modest velvet model is just such as the matron of refinement and discriminating taste would choose.

On some of the most successful velvet daytime dresses hemstitched ruffles are arranged in tiers. Of course the velvet is of the sheerest sort and the flouncing is so arranged as to not destroy the slim silhouette. While black is prime favorite, colors also are popular, especially dark reds, forest green and certain medium browns.

Looking for a hat becoming to the point of flattery, are you? A chapeau lovely for the dance and eveberet drape of velvet which enters into alliance with a wide and tight-banded drape of glimmering gold cloth.

As to whether these little metal types be gold or silver one need not be concerned, for one is as popular as the other.

Novelty embroidered hats, the soft frameless kind, have come back into fashion. They are so satisfactory when it comes to giving a dash of color to the furrowed winter coat. Gold-and-silver kid is introduced in conjunction with vivid hand-stitchery and beadwork. JULIA BOTTOMOLEY. (© 1926 Western Newspaper Union.)

THROUGH A WOMAN'S EYES

By JEAN NEWTON

They Are Thinking of Living With Him

We need no longer worry about divorce—the millennium is here! College girls answering a questionnaire as to the most important quality in a husband have voted for a sense of humor. Brains, ambition, income, companionship—all of these came in for attention. But their first requirement, the asset rated highest in a prospective husband was—a sense of humor.

Judging by the way many of the wives who are weighing the calendars in the divorce courts made their choice, we might expect the questionnaire to be answered something like this:

1. Good looks—the right kind of eyes essential.
2. "Class" in wearing his clothes.
3. Good dancer—up on the latest jazz.
4. That way of looking at you that lets you know immediately you are the only girl in the world.
5. A fascinating smile.
6. That masterly, dominating way; either he has it or he hasn't.
7. The right manners—that solicitous tone.
8. Ability to serenade; banjo preferred to uke.
9. Enough romance to recognize a moonlight night when he sees it.
10. A good sport—meaning a cheerful spender.

Questionnaires usually stop at "ten," otherwise we should give in more detail the standards by which countless girls have judged the desirability of young men as husbands—all of which would manifest a similar depth of discrimination and realization of the qualities which count most in a life partner.

But all that is changed. Girls, young girls, girls at college and still under the spell of their playdays, require that the man they marry shall have first of all a sense of humor. They seem actually to realize that they will have to live with the man. They seem to be actually thinking ahead to real life and its intrusions of the butcher and the baker and teething babies, life which tries the best of us sometimes most unexpectedly to the very depths of our souls. And by some miracle, some gift of divination, these girls have sensed a quality that counts tremendously in real life, that is a good guide over the rough places, that helps mightily to make a man a good partner and kind protector in whose humor there is understanding, whose understanding makes him indulgent of mistakes and unafraid of trouble—the likeable, lovable, lovable, easy-to-live-with kind of man who makes the ideal husband.

What Are Your Associates?

It is written in a Japanese story that once a man set out in pursuit of a rose. He sought it a long time, but nothing seemed to be that flower, which he knew only by hearsay, for its incomparable perfume and the beauty of its multiple corolla.

He saw the admirable amaryllis, balancing on flexible stems their exquisitely-scented chalices, whose tender tints were touched with brown spots, that seemed like the tears of night.

He had inhaled—quite surprised to find them without perfume—the breath of the proud peonies which bloomed nearby, looking like a sort of burning bush.

The fragrant stalactites of the acacias had breathed upon him their balmy incense. He had paused before the carnations, which, in their green chalices, looked like the throats of warriors, bursting out of their armor.

The sumptuous mourning of the black lily also had attracted him; but none of these flowers were, nor could be, the rose, and he was almost in despair when he saw, quite near him, alight on a bush a butterfly of the most dazzling colors, and a delightful aroma seemed to be diffused from it, while its wings quivered like the petals of a flower shaken by the wind.

Greatly moved, the man approached it saying:

"Beautiful creature, glowing with colors so brilliant and exhaling a perfume so sweet, can it be that you are the rose?"

"No," said the butterfly, "I am not the rose, but I live near the rose; I love the refuge of her flowery arches and branches. I come to sleep in the hollows of her corollas, and sip the sweet perfume of her petals. That is the reason why I have partaken of her fragrance."

As the butterfly retained something of the scent of the rose with which it came in frequent contact, so we cannot escape the reflection in ourselves of those with whom we associate.

Fast Climbing

A short time ago the Eiffel tower was the scene of a novel competition, in which substantial prizes were offered to those who reached its second floor in the quickest time. This feat, that involved the climbing of 700 steps, was performed by one man in the wonderful time of 134 seconds. His nearest female rival took 7 minutes 26 seconds to reach the goal.

Milk Globules

The fat in milk is in the form of minute droplets which are distributed throughout the milk in the form of emulsion. The fat globules of Jersey and Guernsey milk are larger than Holstein-Ayrshire, while the size of globules in Shorthorn milk ranges between. The fat will rise to the surface more rapidly in milk containing large fat globules. It has been estimated that a quart of average milk contains not less than 2,000,000,000,000 fat globules.

France Has Plan to Harness Ocean

France is ahead of other nations in efforts to derive power from the tides. On the north coast of Brittany, at Aber-Vruch, an experiment in harnessing the ocean is to be made shortly on a large scale.

The tidal flow up and down the small River Douris is extremely strong, with a height of 25 feet. This in itself, of course, is not exceptional, but it is sufficient for the object in view.

French engineers expect to obtain from this river a constant supply of electricity of 3,800 horse power, and this in two years would pay for the construction of the two dams which are to impound and control the tidal water and other mechanical installations necessary.

If success is attained at Aber-Vruch, there is no doubt that similar enterprises will spring up in other countries. The fjords of Scotland and Scandinavia and the inlets of New England, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia furnish favorable natural conditions.

Many people imagine that Worms or Tapeworms cannot be expelled entirely. A single dose of "Dead Shot" proves that they can. 372 Pearl St., N. Y. Adv.

Your Dollar Spent In Redwood City Enriches Many People

URING THE LAST FEW WEEKS, BY STORIES AND EDITORIALS THE "TIMES-GAZETTE" HAS TRIED TO IMPRESS UPON ITS READERS THE IMPORTANCE TO THEMSELVES AND THE COMMUNITY AS AWHOLE, OF DOING THEIR TRADING IN REDWOOD CITY.

WE ARE INTERESTED IN SEEING REDWOOD CITY GROW. IT MEANS BETTER ADVANTAGES FOR OURSELVES AND OUR CHILDREN, TO SEE REDWOOD CITY'S POPULATION INCREASE.

PEOPLE ARE ATTRACTED TO MAKE THEIR HOME IN A COMMUNITY THAT RADIATES CIVIC PRIDE, THAT HAS GOOD STREETS, NICE HOMES, UP-TO-DATE STORES. IT IS THE MONEY THAT IS SPENT IN OUR CITY THAT MAKES THESE THINGS POSSIBLE. CONSIDER THE PATH OF A DOLLAR SPENT WITH THE LOCAL GROCER. PART OF IT IS PASSED ON TO HIS CLERK, WHO USES IT TO PAY RENT OR BUY CLOTHES, AND IN TURN HIS LAND LORD USES IT TO PAY TAXES TO HELP BUILD STREETS, OR HIS CLOTHIER HANDS IT ON AGAIN TO HIS EMPLOYEE WHO PAYS IT WITH HIS GROCER OR BUTCHER AND SO ON IN AN ENDLESS CHAIN. WHAT IF THAT DOLLAR IS SPENT ELSEWHERE? DO YOU SUPPOSE ANY PART OF IT EVER FINDS ITS WAY BACK TO REDWOOD CITY? IT ISN'T VERY LIKELY IS IT? IT GOES TO BUILD STREETS OR TO SUPPORT THE BUTCHER OR THE BAKER IN SOME OTHER CITY. ISN'T IT TRUE THAT WHEN YOU SPEND MONEY AT HOME YOU HAVE GOTTEN DOUBLE VALUE?

WHY SHOULD WE THEN ACTUALLY GO OUT OF OUR WAY TO LOSE MONEY WHICH IS WHAT WE DO WHEN WE DO NOT TRADE AT HOME?

The Girl in the Mirror

Elizabeth Jordan

(By The Century Company.)

Jepson moved ponderously away to do so, while Rodney, opening his big box in the hall, drew out the polka-dot and chrysanthemum and proceeded to arrange them in a gorgeous, colorful arrangement, as Epstein's stage-directors had discovered in the past. Laurie watched him with polite interest.

"Making a picture of yourself, aren't you?" he asked. "Going into the sick-room with your little hands full of flowers?" But even as he scoffed he was unwrapping his own flowers. Bangs was right. The act of handling a pastebord was to a sick friend lacked esthetic value.

Jepson returned with a cordial message. Mrs. Ordway would be charmed to see both young men, but she received only one visitor at a time. Would Mr. Bangs come up now? Or perhaps Mr. Devon would drop in again during the afternoon or evening.

Rodney grasped his floral offerings and mounted the stairs two steps at a time. He was excited and his brown eyes showed it. It was most awfully good of Mrs. Ordway to let him come up in this informal way. Standing by the chaise longue where she lay, he told her so, his brown head shining among the flowers he carried, like a particularly large chrysanthemum. Then, selecting some empty vases, he sat down on the floor beside her and began to arrange his flowers, while she watched him, at first with surprise, then with growing admiration.

Rodney had no social airs and graces, no parlor tricks. If he had been formally sitting on a chair, holding his hat, he would have been a self-conscious and unhappy young man. As it was, with hands and eyes busy, and wholly at his ease, he talked his exuberant best.

"How about Laurie's romance?" Laurie asked at once.

Bangs told her about the vision in the mirror. As he did so, luncheon was served, and he was casually invited to share it. Susanne, moving shuttle-like between the table in the sick-room and the parlor, was in the upper hall, presently confided to a young footman a surprising piece of news, which he in turn confided to the incredulous Jepson. Young Mr. Bangs, who was lunching with Mrs. Ordway, must be as amusing as young Mr. Devon himself. He had actually made the mistress laugh both times he came. She was laughing now, as Susanne had not heard her laugh for weeks. To be sure, this was one of her good days. But it wasn't easy to amuse Mrs. Ordway at any time.

Jepson summed up the situation in an oracular utterance:

"Henny one that's a friend of Mr. Devon's his hall right."

When Rodney was leaving Jepson's mistress expressed the same thought to her guest in a different way.

"Come often," she said. "You have given me a new interest. I don't think you quite realize what that means to me."

When Sonya arrived at five that afternoon, she found Jepson still exuding reassurance. With two doctors with in call, a nurse in the house, and Mr. Devon and Miss Griffee to telephone to at a moment's notice, "nothing much could happen." So reasoned Jepson. He beamed approvingly on Sonya, informed her that Mr. Devon was in the sick-room now, and waved her through the hall with an effect of benediction.

She found Laurie just leaving, and they had a moment's chat on the upper landing. Mrs. Ordway, he told her, was rather restless this afternoon, but she seemed better than she had been yesterday. However, he didn't like her looks at all, and he fancied the nurse was disturbed. Suppose Sonya sounded Laurie about cabling for Warren? Surely Warren would want to know, Laurie thought.

For the moment Laurie's striking good looks were slightly dimmed. He was hollow-eyed, almost haggard. Things were coming just a bit too fast for him. The habit of carrying the burden of others had been taken on too suddenly. Under the strain of it, his untrained mental muscles ached.

It was the irony of fate that Sonya, looking at him with the clear brown eyes that were so much softer than Bangs', and so much less beautiful than Doris', should misinterpret his appearance, his emotion, and his reaction from the high spirits of the action from the high spirits of the morning. He was again going the pace, she decided; and, mingled with her pity for him, rose the scorn of a strong soul that was the absolute master of the body in which it dwelt.

His newly aroused perception carried some hint of this scorn to the boy, covered though it was by the friendliness of Sonya's manner. The knowledge added to his wretchedness. He had a childish desire to explain, but he conquered it and hurried away. Some day, if not now, Sonya would understand.

What he himself did not understand was the long stride he had taken in the moment when he felt and resented her unspoken criticism. Heretofore his attitude had been one of expressed and sincere indifference to the opinions others held of him. He wanted them to like him, but he didn't care a hang whether or not they approved of him. Now, suddenly, he wanted Sonya's respect as well as her liking. The discovery added to his mental confusion.

If Sonya, when she entered the sick-room, was shocked by the change in the appearance of her new friend, she showed no sign of it. Sitting down beside the chaise longue, she entered briskly upon a description of the recent experiences of Samuel. When she left the hospital the house surgeon was obediently endeavoring to look down the throat of Helen R. J., and every nurse on Samuel's floor was scuttering in and out of his room. Nevertheless the infant, though graciously accepting these attentions, had demanded and received Sonya's personal assurance that the particular game of the morning was not to be repeated. There was an unpleasant element in that game which grown-ups might not notice but which he, Samuel, had caught on to.

Louise laughed and expressed a hope that Samuel would now be able to breathe without disturbing his neighbors. Sonya came to the real purpose of her visit.

"He and his mother are going back to Devon house Saturday," she said. "But I've got to stay in New York for a few months, on account of my literary galumphings. I wondered if you—if it would be convenient for you—to put me up. I hate hotels and—"

Louise lay silent for a moment. Then she reached out and took Sonya's hand.

"Yes, you unskilful prevaricator," she said. "You may come—and see me through."

Sonya held the hand tightly in her own.

"There's one thing more," she went on, hesitatingly. "Laurie and Mr.

Warren."

"I've reached the point where I can't endure that any more." For the first time her voice broke. "Can't you imagine what that sort of thing would be? To get up in the morning and wonder if this is the day I'll see him under my window? To go to bed at night and ask myself if he is lurking in the shadows below, or across the street? To know that sooner or later he will be there, that his coming is as inevitable as death itself?" She broke off.

"I sometimes think I'd rather see a box-constructor crawling into my room than see Shaw down on the sidewalk," she ended. "And yet—I know you can understand this—there's a queer kind of relief in the knowledge that at last, and finally, he has got me."

She whirled to face Laurie, and threw out her hands. There was nothing theatrical in the gesture, merely an effort of entire faith.

"We have come to the end of things," she finished. "Since you would not have them end my way, they must end his way. Whatever happens, I shall not run and hide any more."

For a moment silence hung like a substance between them. Then the visitor resolutely shook off the effect of her words.

"I promise you I will get to the bottom of this," he quietly told her. "In the meantime, will you try to forget it, for a little while? You know you said you could do that, occasionally."

"If I Moved, How Long Do You Think It Would Take Him to Find Me?"

Bangs and I would like it perhaps you wouldn't feel more comfortable if Mr. Warren came home. You know he himself would want to—"

"Yes," she said, "Bob would want to, if he knew."

She was silent for so long that Sonya began to think she was not to have the answer to her question. Perhaps Mrs. Ordway was leaving the decision to her.

But to leave to others decisions that concerned herself was not Louise Ordway's habit. Instead, she was fighting a battle in which the lifelong devotion of a supremely self-centered nature was struggling with a new-born unselfishness. Though new-born it was strong, as the invalid's next words showed.

"If I were calling him back from anything but his honeymoon," she said at last, "I'd do it. But he's utterly happy. His letters show that. In every line I want him to stay so, as long as he can. I want his honeymoon to be long drawn out and perfect." Her manner changed.

"I have an idea that perhaps, after all, I'll be here when he gets back," she added more lightly. "Life still has its interests. But, if I happen not to be here, tell him why I didn't cable."

"I will tell him," Sonya promised. Neither of them referred to the subject again.

CHAPTER IX

An Invitation

That evening Laurie walked across the square to Doris' studio with a decision in his stride which definitely expressed his mental attitude. He had come to the conclusion that something must be done. What this something would be was still hazy in his mind, but the first step at least seemed clear. Doris must move.

He was so convinced of the urgency of this step that he brought up the subject almost before the greetings of guest and hostess were over. Tossing his hat and coat on a convenient chair, he stood facing Doris, his hands in his pockets, his black eyes somber.

"We've got to get out of this, you know," he abruptly announced.

Her eyes, which had brightened at his entrance, grew as somber as his own. Without replying, she turned, walked across the room to the window, and stood looking down into the street.

"If he there?" she asked at last, and without moving her head.

"Shaw? Great Scott, no! At least I didn't see him. I suppose he takes a few hours off now and then, during the twenty-four; doesn't he?"

"Oh, yes, he comes and goes, sometimes secretly, sometimes openly. I did not see him at all today until late this afternoon. Then he took up his post across the street just opposite this window, and stood there for almost an hour."

Laurie ground his teeth.

"What does he expect to gain by that performance?"

"Several things, I suppose. For one, he wants to get on my nerves; and he does," she added somberly, and still without turning.

Laurie made a vague tour around the room and brought up by her side.

"You know," he confessed, "I haven't really taken this thing in yet. Even now, this minute, it doesn't seem possible to me that Shaw could do you any real harm."

She nodded. "I know. Why should it? Even to me it is like a nightmare and I keep hoping to wake up. There are hours, even days, when I convince myself that it isn't real." She stopped. "It must be very hard for any one else to understand," she ended, when he did not speak.

"Nevertheless," admitted Laurie, "I can't forget it. I can't think of anything else."

She took this as naturally as she had taken his first remark.

"It's going to be very hard for you. I was wrong to draw you into it. I am realizing that more and more, every minute."

"You couldn't help yourself," he cheerfully reminded her. "Now that I am in it, as I've warned you before, I intend to run things. It seems to me that the obvious course for you is to move. After you're safely hidden somewhere, I think I can teach Herbert Ransome Shaw a lesson that won't react on you."

She shook her head.

"If I moved, how long do you think it would take him to find me?"

"Weeks, perhaps months."

Again she shook her head.

"I moved here a few days ago. He appeared exactly forty-eight hours later. If I moved from here it would only mean going through the game of hare and hounds again."

"But—" he began. She interrupted him.

"I've reached the point where I can't endure that any more." For the first time her voice broke. "Can't you imagine what that sort of thing would be? To get up in the morning and wonder if this is the day I'll see him under my window? To go to bed at night and ask myself if he is lurking in the shadows below, or across the street? Land of the Seven Castles

Draft Oxen of Rural Transylvania.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

RUMANIA always was a land of contrast, geographically, socially, and historically, but since the great accretions to her territory that have come about as a result of the World War the contradictory elements within her borders are even more striking.

She contains an epitome of the history of Europe from Roman times to the present, and people and places illustrative of each stage are found side by side within her confines.

One may see on the same day a shepherd in a long fleece cape, moving across the plains toward the mountains like a quaint survival of an ancient civilization; a fiery nomadic gypsy galloping along a dusty road, with long hair streaming; a peasant like a soldier from Trajan's column at Rome, with white, embroidered blouse and thigh-bound legs, scratching the soil with a primitive plow; a nobleman in his castle gazing down into a medieval Saxon village; and an oil magnate scattering his wealth amid Bucharest's imitative charms.

Many of these contrasts were inherent within the prewar boundaries and all of them in much enlarged postwar Rumania, due to the addition of Transylvania to the kingdom. This is because Transylvania, known in Rumanian as Ardeal (Forest Land), in Hungarian as Erdely, and in German as Siebenburgen, has been the frontier of the West against the East for centuries.

Its inhabitants have, furthermore, successfully maintained that border against the Turks since 1700, and this history of border wars has given the region its racial complexity and architectural charms.

Nowhere in Europe is the sense of pleasant remoteness more keenly felt than in this district. Though little known to a traveling public, it is part of the stuff that all our dreams are made of, through such novels as "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Graustark," which seem either consciously or unconsciously to have been laid in the neighborhood of some one of the seven castles which give the German name, Siebenburgen, to the province and which are quartered on the arms of greater Rumania.

Mixture of Races.

The towns of the castles were settled by Germans from Franconia, who were locally called Saxons and who, in all the years of their separation from Germany, have maintained a close connection with their mother country, its culture and institutions, the while efficiently keeping the Carpathian frontier.

They had likewise the co-operation of the Szeklers, close kinsmen of Magyars, who for their delight in combat have been settled along the northern portion of the mountain wall. Back of these warders the mass of Magyar farmers and Rumania laborers, foresters, and shepherds tilled the fertile valleys between the rolling foothills that gradually ebb from the Carpathians toward the Hungarian plain.

It is this mountain wall that accounts for the history of Transylvania—a jagged, glorious barrier that dominates the landscape.

The Saxon woman, pausing in the field to adjust her straw sailor hat atop her tightly bound kerchief, gazes at the rugged heights as if at the border of the unknown. The Rumanian cowherd, driving his sleek cattle along the Olt, knows that beyond those heights the brothers of his race now rule; and the Magyar farmer looks upon them and wishes they had been higher and untraversable.

Yet, had the mountains been impenetrable, Transylvania would have been neither so picturesque nor so rich. Fear of the Turks accounts for the walled towns, fortified churches, and great castles. Trade with the East accounts for the prosperity of the guilds in Brasov and other towns, as well as for the beauty of such structures as the Black church, with its priceless collection of prayer rugs.

Became Part of Rumania.

Transylvania, on account of its geographic situation, like a natural fortress on the borders of Europe, has been semi-independent from early times, and was recognized among the titles of the king of Hungary as a grand principality. However, administratively, it had been since 1868 an integral part of Hungary.

In this status the country remained until 1918, though not without certain uprisings among the Rumanian population which was denied many of the political rights enjoyed by the other three nationalities. As a result of the peace treaties following the World War, and on the basis of the fact that a larger portion of the inhabitants of this region were Rumanian in race and language, the province became a part of Rumania.

The best way to obtain the full flavor of Transylvania is to approach it from the east via the road from Bucharest to Sinalia, across the baking, dusty plain, through the region heavy with the odor of petroleum, up the slopes of the Carpathians where mountain streams have gashed rough earth wounds in the hillsides, past artificial-looking folklore castles, to the ancient frontier of Transylvania, at the top of the pass at Predael.

Here, upon emerging from the narrow valley on a high plateau, there is spread before one a view of the receding foothills and expanding plain of Transylvania.

Before one comes in sight of Brasov one is already aware of what the mountain barrier has meant and what it has protected for so many centuries. In about half an hour from Predael the mountains give way to the fertile plain known as the Burzenland, which surrounds Brasov.

Brasov is interesting.

This town of some 60,000 inhabitants has been suggested as a capital for the new and greater Rumania, and it has much to recommend it, being almost in the center of the country, easily defended, having the charm of age and tradition and room for expansion in the surrounding plain.

Nevertheless, the tourist cannot but be grateful that nothing has as yet come of a project which would annihilate an ancient Saxon border stronghold amid Frenchified public buildings, such as modern architects would be likely to erect to house the official departments of this highly centralized government.

The present-day citizens of Brasov look not unlike German university students; no trace of centuries of battles with the heathen gleams in their spectacled eyes, and no frontiersman's freedom of motion betrays itself through their stiff-cut clothes. Blond they are and blue-eyed, but they are obliged to yield in freshness of complexion to their rustic cousins of nearby agricultural villages.

The Black church, which dominates the town, derives its name from the fact that it was burned in 1689 and never properly restored since. The result is both dour and impressive. It is a good example of fifteenth-century Gothic, without any tower.

With Brasov as a center, one may explore the Saxon and Szekler regions at the base of the mountains. Southward lies the Saxon town of Rumanov (Rosenau), over which towers the massive ruin of the Burgberg, now owned by the former Crown Prince Carol of Rumania.

There is no approach by road to this giant fortress, but a sharp climb brings one to what was a little city inclosed within the great walls of the castle, whose massive keep still dominates the plain. This once populous village is now inhabited by a single farmer and his wife, who occupy the fortress where once a hundred Teutonic knights kept the border of heathenness.

Beyond Rumanov the road continues into a narrowing valley toward the pass at Bran. Just where the mountain walls almost meet, a little knoll with the river and road curving sharply at its base is topped by the castle of Bran, a gift to the queen of Rumania by the city corporation of Brasov. This, perhaps the most perfect fairy-story castle in the region, hangs above the little Rumanian village, intimate yet aloof.

These Women!

Any time one woman has something she thinks another woman ought to know—something which, as a friend, she thinks she ought to tell—you can bet it is something the other woman isn't going to want to hear.—Acheson Daily Globe.

Clothes From Grass

The secret of turning tropical grasses and other fibrous substances into clothes to wear is believed to have been solved by Dr. Dinslaw Nanji of Birmingham university, says Science Magazine. Chemical processes are said to have been perfected for separating the fibers from the raw materials and preparing them for spinning. The fabrics, if commercially successful, may take the place of cotton in the regions where large supplies of grasses are available. It is thought that new and interesting materials may be developed for wearing apparel and for other uses.

Every family needs a car

Within the General Motors line there is "a car for every purse and purpose."

And those who wish to buy General Motors cars out of income are offered a sound credit service at low cost. This is known as the GMAC Plan, operated by a member of the General Motors family and available through General Motors dealers only.

The GMAC Plan can be comfortably fitted to the individual circumstances of those with assured income; and the standard price of a General Motors car bought on the GMAC Plan is the cash delivered price, plus only the low GMAC financing charge.

Any General Motors dealer will gladly explain the GMAC Plan.

Aid for Spawning Fishes

Because the building of huge water-power dams in the streams on the Pacific coast has brought a serious problem to the production of salmon and trout, elevators are being constructed to carry the fish to the quiet headwaters of the streams to spawn. The device is operated by hydraulic pressure and is automatic in every respect. It can be utilized at any obstruction, regardless of height, and ash can go down as well as up.

News of Menlo Park

Large Flocks of Pigeons

Large flocks of wild pigeons were seen flying over town yesterday morning. The birds were driven down from the mountains by the storm and are feeding upon the valley acorns. They cannot be shot as they are protected by the federal law, being migratory birds, so the small boy with his gun will have to be a little careful.

Rain Fall 5 Inches

The rain fall for the season is five inches which is above normal for this time of the year. The recent storm caused very little damage in this locality. Several trees were blown down, likewise several hundred yards of fencing. The loss, however, is not serious.

Auto Wrecking Plant To Start

Frank Williams of Mayfield has leased the old Japanese laundry building on the highway for an auto wrecking plant and will occupy it next week.

At The Menlo Theatre

This evening in the New Menlo Theatre "Jetta Gonda" will appear in "Her Man O'War." Tomorrow evening Douglas MacLean will appear in "Hold That Line." Monday and Tuesday evening "The Still Alarm" is to be presented. Wednesday and Thursday nights, Rudolph Valentino will appear in "The Son of the Sheik."

Robert Towsey, Twelve, Dies

Robert Towsey, the 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Towsey of Crescent Park, Palo Alto, passed away at the Rio Vista Military Academy last Saturday. He had been in the academy three weeks when the summons came. Prior to that time he was a student at St. Joseph's parochial school here, where he had a record as a bright pupil. His older sister, Virginia, is a student at the institution.

Another son died some three years ago, which makes the present death all the more sad. Mr. Towsey arrived home from the east, where he had gone on business, in time for the funeral services yesterday in the Church of the Nativity. Robert Towsey was a bright, cheerful and lovable boy, liked by his playmates and others for his kind and manly ways. His bereaved parents have the sympathy of the community in their loss.

Bi-Weekly Meeting of C. of C.

The Menlo Park Chamber of Commerce held its bi-weekly meeting last Monday night and transacted much routine business. E. E. Puaule of the entertainment committee, reported that all plans were completed for the card party to be held in the grammar school auditorium on the evening of December 4th. The proceeds are to provide a children's night for Christmas for the Menlo Park kiddies.

The chamber went on record as favoring the proposed $60,000 contour map for engineering purposes which the United States government plans to make in conjunction with San Francisco and San Mateo counties.

At the request of all present Chairman Sullivan appointed a committee consisting of J. J. Harcum, E. E. Quayle and L. H. Cook with instructions to investigate conditions and determine of the time was now ripe for the resumption of plans for incorporation.

Death Recalls Career in this State

The death of Judge McKenna in Washington during the week recalls his career in this state. It was eventful and marked with success. The judge was well known in Menlo Park, where he often visited his friend and mentor, the late Senator C. M. Felton. Both served in congress together. When Felton was elevated to the senate at the death of George Hearst he used his influence with President Harrison in appointing McKenna to the Circuit bench in San Francisco. The judge served with the late President McKinley on the Ways and Means committee, while in congress and when the latter was elected president he made McKenna his attorney general and a year later appointed him to the United States Supreme Court. This was only keeping an agreement made by the president to appoint his friend McKenna to the higher court, whenever a vacancy occurred in that tribunal. The appointment was bitterly opposed in California by the state bar association. Such men as the late John T. Doyle, then the leader of the state bar, Hall McAllister and other prominent lawyers fought the confirmation on the ground of incompetency. It is true that McKenna was a man of mediocre ability. However, he made good on the supreme court bench his decisions being able, lucid, clear and showed wisdom. He served with distinction for twenty-seven years on the bench resigning last year after the death of his wife McKenna keenly felt the opposition to his appointment from his state and from those whom he considered his friends. After his elevation to the bench in Washington he never again visited the coast or his beloved California.

McKenna came to Benecia as a boy from the east and by hard work and energy carved out an enviable career for himself, aided by such influential men as Felton. McKenna aspired for Congress. Three times before he was successful, but he had courage, ambition and finally reached his goal. Young men might well study the career of McKenna if they wish a successful career.

Yesterday morning large flocks of sea gulls, hundreds in number, passed over town on their way southward. Sea faring men say this is a sign of a big storm on the ocean and that the heavy gale has driven the birds inland. A local way says, however, that the birds had been following a Scotch ship out at sea and having arrived at port came down the peninsula to secure a "wee" mouthful.

The first deed for a right of way in this locality through property over which the Bayshore boulevard will be constructed was signed on Wednesday. James T. O'Keefe and D. E. O'Keefe gave a deed to the state for five and a quarter acres of land, a portion of their ranch of one hundred acres at North Palo Alto, free, the state to construct the highway. This was the only consideration. According to the prices asked for land bordering on the proposed highway, the right-away transferred by the O'Keefe Brothers would be worth $20,000. They plan to be reimbursed for this sum by the advanced value of land caused by the advent of the highway through the tract which is now being subdivided and placed on the market.

This was the only consideration. According to the prices asked for land bordering on the proposed highway, the right-away transferred by the O'Keefe Brothers would be worth $20,000. They plan to be reimbursed for this sum by the advanced value of land caused by the advent of the highway through the tract which is now being subdivided and placed on the market.

The first deed for a right of way in this locality through property over which the Bayshore boulevard will be constructed was signed on Wednesday. James T. O'Keefe and D. E. O'Keefe gave a deed to the state for five and a quarter acres of land, a portion of their ranch of one hundred acres at North Palo Alto, free, the state to construct the highway.
